

Crystal Sprouts

In these far away lands, rare plants on the top of floating islands are said to sprout tiny crystals within their roots. Legends and myths roam the valleys, promising magic and endless possibilities to bend the fabric of reality for those who can harness the energy from these crystals, which most people have never even seen.

There are rumors of foreign merchants, who claim to carry magical goods and potions made from crystal dust, and even some who claim to have caged the energy itself, being ready to use by those who offer enough in exchange.

Other rumors, even older, tell of strange creatures who inhabit the floating islands, and seem to care for the plants, acting as guardians of the crystals. Cautionary tales for children present these guardians as having a civilization of their own, as old as time itself, living through means none of us can comprehend. 'Maybe they are the weavers of reality', some say. Others shush these foolish ideas, as 'they are simply from another dimension', as if that was more believable.

Now it's up to you. Take these sprouts and create.

What do these crystals really do?

What are they?

Who are the guardians of the floating islands?

Do the merchants really own crystal powered goods?

How did they get it?

What do they want?

We hope these seeds allow your imagination to sprout adventures and stories in these distant lands.

